ELEVATING
PUBLIC SERVICE
MOTIVATION

ASPEN GROVE CONFERENCE

Sundance UT

Brigham Young University

Sep 25-28, 2019

Public service motivation has enjoyed remarkable attention and development. Even still, one might argue that PSM stands at the threshold of a new generation of development. Recent critiques (e.g., Bozeman & Su, 2015), reviews (Ritz, Brewer & Neumann, 2016; Christensen, Paarlberg, & Perry, 2017), and special issues (e.g., Yang & Xu IPMJ 2013; Boyd PMR 2018) all underscore potential avenues of development.

The purpose of this conference is not only to enhance and extend current trajectories, but especially to challenge and elevate the next generation of public service motivation research and applications. To this end we'll feature a diversity of scholars, prominent practitioners, and working sessions.

The conference organizers will be seeking proposals of several varieties from new and established contributors across the globe:

- individual research papers
- panels (multiple research efforts coordinated around one or more themes)
- idea incubators (sessions flexibly designed to move embryonic ideas that add to our stock of knowledge through development; participation/collaboration—both pre-arranged and spontaneous—is encouraged in these sessions)

We also anticipate several prominent symposia/special issues and research-practice conversations to be associated with this conference. Plenary papers are available here. http://bit.ly/byupsm_plenaries.

Hosted by Brigham Young University at their Aspen Grove facility in Sundance, UT, this conference commemorates 10 years since the original 2009 conference held in Bloomington, Indiana. The setting will be relaxed and amenable to interaction and creativity.

Housing, dining and recreation are all on-site and included in a single registration fee (estimated to be less than $600 USD). Space constraints limit us to approximately 100 participants. Communicate as early as possible to let us know of your interest.
